

HARTFORD HERALD

FRANK L. FELIX, Proprietor.
REBER MATTHEWS, Editor.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13

OLD DOMINECK's voice may be a little strident and disturbing, but every time she cackles, it means two cents and a-half in the family treasury.

HON. W. J. BRYAN, editor of the Commoner, returned last Saturday from a trip to European countries. He reports a most enjoyable journey.

KENTUCKY may be a good place to raise sand in, but she is not profitable in cotton. Only 428 bales were raised last season, against 1027 the previous output.

THE fact that no Democrat who has yet been mentioned for the Presidency (except one or two whose chances are nil) seems to please the Republican leaders, augurs well for the success of the next Democratic national ticket.

SOME men have to submit to having their hair cut by their wives. There seems to be no general complaint at this, but it is a fact of historic note that as soon as Samson got from under his wife's shears, he went and pulled down a temple and killed himself.

THE almanac fellows tell us that this is leap year. The old bachelor who for the past eight years has been basking in the sunlight of celibate security, now finds himself shivering on the precipice of conjugal felicity. Cupid's darts are flying in every direction, aimed with the delicate accuracy of feminine hands.

It is said that our present Congressman, Hon. D. H. Smith, is a tacit candidate for United States Senator. In this event, his claims will be presented before the next General Assembly. David has acquired the habit of getting whiffler he starts out after, and if he really wants the Senatorship, the Senatorship is mighty likely to be his.

At the hour of going to press we had no late reports of the matter, but it was generally conceded that the Democratic National Committee, which held a meeting in Washington yesterday, would conclude to hold the National Convention in Chicago. The two names most prominently mentioned in connection with the Democratic Presidential nomination are those of Gorman and Parker.

RIGOROUS investigation has been going on of late to see whether the Louisville churches were properly constructed to afford escape in case of fire. The churches really should be able to guarantee the best fire escape, both spiritual and temporal, to be had, and whether they do or not, seems to depend greatly upon the faith of the fellow in danger or the work of the contractors and builders.

TEDDY tried to spike Mark's Presidential gun by committing him as his campaign manager, but the Ohio Senator was too sharp for that. The very boldness of the game killed its purpose. Teddy's versatile hand is not of the fine Italian sort by any means. It has the tendency of its owner to buck-jump and be conspicuous. The way Hanna is backing up to the Presidential nomination while pretending to flee from it, is amusing.

HON. JOHN W. YERKES says that Kentucky Republicans will hold their convention in April or shortly after May 1. He says the convention will endorse President Roosevelt and his Administration and that the delegates to the National Convention will be instructed to vote for Roosevelt. Evidently the Republican party of Kentucky has a nice cold piece of the forequarter of swine ready to serve Mr. Hanna on a gold-trimmed silver.

THE Todd County Progress has entered upon the 49th year of its publication, and it is a better paper than ever before. Mr. L. W. Gaines, its editor, is one of the most versatile and accomplished newspaper men in the South, and the age of his charge and the abundant evidences of his prosperity, are fair indications of what he has done to make the Progress one of the most popular papers in Kentucky. Long may the Progress continue to progress!

WHILE the friends of Roosevelt and Hanna are vying with each other in championing the cause of their favorite, nobody seems to have a candidate for a running mate for either of these men. There seems to be no parent or suggested candidate for Vice President on the Republican ticket. No conspicuous member of the President's party has indicated a desire to become his running mate. It is said that several have flatly declined. It seems a little strange that nobody should covet such a distinguished honor.

WE hope our correspondents will come to the front oftener and more punctually during the present year than during the closing months of 1903. Send us the news, as often as you hear of it. We would rather have a short, newsy letter once a week than a long communication once a month. Write only on one side of the paper, make a paragraph of each different subject and write plainly. In a corner sign each letter with your real name. It will not be printed. Mail your letters so they will reach us Mondays.

It is a fact most generally understood in political circles that no man was ever elected to the Presidency by the solid and strict vote of his party. Much dependence is always put in the hands of independent element conservative of the other side. Candidates are most generally selected with this idea in view—that they will not only please the members of their own party, but draw votes from the ranks of the opposition. Wise party men are tolerant. The man to win is the fellow who can get the most votes. And to support such a man does not always imply any sacrifice of principle.

WE believe we are correct when we say that Hartford is the best town of its size in Kentucky, without a railroad. There is an immense amount of business done here, and it is of the solid, substantial sort. No people on the face of the earth are more courteous, congenial and enterprising than the citizens of Hartford. Strangers who come here bear willing testimony to this assertion. It is a good place to live in and a good place to die in. The people who live here enjoy themselves and when they die they are not neglected. Kindheartedness is a prevailing virtue with Hartford people. We haven't got many advantages, but we've got a town worth coming miles to see and staying to enjoy. It disparages no inland town of its size to say, in comparison, that Hartford is the best place.

WE have received for publication, from the Children's Home Society at Louisville, an "important notice" to the effect that James W. Gardner, who has been in the employ of this society as District Superintendent for the past four years, "is no longer connected with said Society," and warning the public not to address any communications to him in the future. It would seem from the spirit of the letter that the Society and Mr. Gardner have had some disagreement, which is none of our business nor the public's. The letter looks more like a spiteful thrust than anything else, and reflects more upon this benevolent Society than upon Mr. Gardner. We don't know the particulars of the apparent trouble, but we believe that it will be hard for the Society to get a man who could be so effectively the children's friend, as Mr. Gardner.

THE CHURCH AND THE NEEDY.
It is a fact as sad as it is commendable that the modern lodges and fraternal bodies of the country seem to be fast taking the place of the visible Church in the way of relieving the poor and distressed and ministering to the wants and necessities of those worthy unfortunates of the earth who get into trouble and need succor. Nowadays if some great calamity overtakes a man and his family, or any one of them, they never think of appealing to any church, or its members on that account, for assistance. If the head of the family is a member of a lodge in good standing, it generally serves him well; otherwise, relief, if any comes, is obtained from or voluntarily given by the charitably inclined people of the community.

The Church seems not to be regarded as a helper in time of need only in the matter of saving souls. Now, it appears to one who reads the Bible and takes it for what it says, that above all institutions of the earth, the visible Church (without regard to denomination) should be first to minister to the wants and necessities of those in distress. One of the greatest charges given to a Christian church member is to love his neighbor as himself. Loving him in this manner, he could not fail to go to his relief in times of sickness, want, or trouble from any cause.

Across the tide of years and whose anniversary we have just finished celebrating, comes the words and warning of Him who so earnestly described the events of that last great day when the peoples of the earth shall be called before that awful tribunal of eternal arbitrament:

"For I was an hungry and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger and ye took me not in; naked and ye clothed me not; and in prison and ye visited me not."

Surely, from the meaning of these words, the Church (or specifically its members) who constitute its body corporate) is expected by Him who created it to do much good towards suffering humanity. And yet a single lodge in a community, if properly supported and kept up, often does more in a tangible way, to relieve the poor and distressed than all the churches put together. We are not reflecting upon the worth and efficiency of any church (for we have none too many of whatever kind they may be, and they all do much good), but we merely point to one branch of their labors which seems woefully neglected. It would seem that too little attention is paid to the vital teachings of the Holy Word and too much to the ways of the world. For illustration, we need go no farther for advice than to St. James, who said:

"Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. . . . Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he shall have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."

Surely, the efficacy of this procedure should be as good to-day as it was eighteen hundred years ago, but if a fellow should get sick nowadays and send for the elders of the church to come and pray over him, thus aiding, perhaps, the best efforts of the attending physician, his neighbors would think he had gone crazy. The Church seems to be little thought of in a crisis like this. But what of the lodge if a member gets sick? Look and see. Be he Christian or pagan, it matters not to the succeeding hand. His temporal wants in his sore distress are immediately appreciated and means are employed for his relief.

We have no desire to praise the Lodge to the disparagement of the Church, but merely to draw a kindly comparison, hoping that it will stir some mind not only to a more zealous adherence to his choice among the fraternal organizations, but to the privileges and duties of his church.

The Lodge and the Church are not in any sense existing in opposition to each other, and it is probably not the intention that one should usurp the duties of the other. But surely, in the great scheme of human redemption, both temporal and spiritual, the Church should allow no organization on earth to outstrip it in following up the spirit of the Good Samaritan.

Wants a Kentucky Home for Inebriates.

Representative W. D. Claybrook, of Washington county, is enlisting support for the passage of a bill in the Kentucky Legislature which he claims will be more cordially received by the General Assembly than most people would suppose on first thought, and numerous are the members who say the bill will become a law with little effort on the part of its supporters.

The bill provides for an appropriation for the erection of an additional branch to the Leland asylum to be used for the confinement of inebriates. Representative Claybrook says that he is informed that in nearly all of the towns of the State, as well as in many county districts, there are a number of men who are habitual drunkards and are worthless to their respective communities. In fact, he claims they are actual burdens to society, and at times many of them are dangerous. These people might be reformed if placed in confinement under treatment and prevented from indulging according to the dictates of their desires. The bill provides that each man found guilty of drunkenness shall be tried by a jury the same as a lunatic, and if adjudged an inebriate immediately conveyed to the asylum by the sheriff of the county in which he is tried. It is understood that the local option people over the State will father the movement in the hope of reducing the injurious effects of the liquor traffic.

Little Jack Horner.

[Richmond (Va.) News Leader.]
President Roosevelt is quoted as saying to an interviewer: "In John Hay I have a great Secretary of State. In Philander Knox I have a great Attorney General. In Elihu Root I have a great man. Elihu Root could take any one of those places and fill it as well as the one who is now there. And in addition, he is what probably none of these other gentlemen could be—a great Secretary of War." And probably, if the interviewer had been a mind-reader, he would have found that Mr. Roosevelt was thinking: "And in a President I have the greatest of all." Mr. Roosevelt is unquestionably a man of force, and has other admirable characteristics. But he is not supersaturated with underestimation of his own ability, and has frequently done the Little Jack Horner Christmas pie act.

Bradley's Ambition.

Former Gov. W. O. Bradley, of Louisville, has written letters to several Republicans in Washington announcing that he is a candidate for delegate-at-large from Kentucky to the Republican National Convention, and the Republicans have also been advised that Mr. Bradley is fixing his fences to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Fifth district, in spite of the hopes of W. C. Owens and H. S. Irwin, who have congressional aspirations.

Domestic Troubles.

Our Voters.

There are, according to the census, 21,329,819 men of voting age in the United States. Of these, 16,227,285 are natives and 5,102,534 are white.

There are 2,000,000 colored voters. In the last Presidential election, there were 13,959,443 votes cast, which means that over one-third of all voters of legal age failed to vote.

There are 5,000,000 voters of foreign birth in the United States. The number who do not vote increases every year. Also the number of independent voters.

The illiterate vote is large, but is steadily reducing itself.

The most striking fact of these figures is that one man in every three refuses to vote at all. Apparently, the right of suffrage is not valued as it should be.

ALBANY SCHOOLS AT FAIR.

Elaborate Educational Exhibit by New York's Capital.

The city of Albany, N. Y., will make a complete exhibit of work of her public schools, at the World's Fair. The display has been planned to the smallest details by Charles W. Cole, superintendent of schools, and will be ready to be shipped to St. Louis in January. The exhibit will be divided into four parts. First will come the written work of all grades, from the elementary work to the highest branch taught in the High School. The work will be bound in volumes and about fifty books will be required. The second section will be a large collection of samples of drawing. This exhibit will show in proper sequence the work done by all grades, including that of High school pupils. Superintendent Cole believes that this display alone will show that educational work in Albany has reached the top notch of effectiveness.

The third section, and a most interesting one, will be that of kindergarten and manual training work. As it would be practically impossible to ship the actual work of these departments on account of breakage, photographs will be taken of the work and displayed at the exposition. Fifty photographs will be required. The last exhibit will be copies of the latest school reports and administrative papers. Other papers will show how the information contained in these reports is collected.
